1st February 1893, Bertram Greenwood Clough was born at Eastfield Place, Sutton-in-Craven.

Jan/Feb/March quarter of 1893, Bertram's mother Lucy Ellen Clough died, presumably due to complications giving birth to her son.

Apr/May/June quarter of 1900, Bertam's father Frederick Clough was remarried to Isabel Dixon of Sutton-in-Craven.

World War 1

It had been 99 years since Britain was last involved in a major European conflict following the defeat of Napoleon at the Battle of Waterloo in 1815

August 4th 1914

Britain declares war on Germany

In the autumn of 1914, the young men of the nation came from town and village to take the King's shilling and to offer him their dedicated services in defence of their homeland. From mills and mines, from shops and farms, from office chairs and civic departments, from loom, lathe, bench, plough and counter they flooded into the recruiting centres in answer to their nation's call for young manhood. These new recruits came to be known as 'Kitchener's Volunteers'

Prior to enlistment, Bertram Clough was employed as a warp dresser at Messrs. John Clough and Sons, Steeton.

Following the Military Service Act that came into force on 2nd March 1916, Bertram joined up in April 1916 and enlisted into the 11th (reserve) battalion (Duke of Wellington's) West Riding Regiment.

His regimental number was 11-20083 and his rank was Private.

He served in France from the autumn of 1916 for more than a year with the West Riding Regiment and was Wounded in Action on 3 occasions.

At some stage Bertram was transferred to the (Tyneside Scottish) Royal Northumberland Fusiliers and later again to the Royal Fusiliers.

The Western Front

The Western Front was the name applied to the fighting zone in France & Flanders, where the British, Commonwealth, French, Belgian and later American armies faced that of Germany.

It was marked by a system of trenches and fortifications separated by an area known as No Man's land. These fortifications stretched 475 miles and precipitated a style of fighting known as trench warfare.

From the moment the German army moved into Luxemburg on the 2nd August 1914 to the Armistice on the 11th November 1918, the fighting on the Western Front in France & Flanders never stopped.

Just as there were quiet periods, there were also the most intense, savage, huge-scale battles the world has ever known.

Trench warfare, German attack, WW1

In the autumn of 1916, Bertram suffered shrapnel wounds whilst serving in France. He was again Wounded in Action in February 1917 sustaining serious wounds to the leg resulting in 12 months of treatment at King George Hospital in London.

STEETON-WITH-EASTBURN - War Items

News has been received by his friends at Steeton that Private B.G. Clough, of the West Riding Regiment, a well-known Steeton soldier, has been wounded for the second time and is now being cared for in a London Hospital. Pte. Clough was slightly wounded with shrapnel last autumn. - Wounded in the left foot with shrapnel several months ago. Pte. Charles Cockshott of the West Yorks. is now in hospital in France, septic poisoning having set in through his previously injured foot. Both the unfortunate soldiers referred to previous to joining up as Derby men a year ago were warp dressers and in the employ of Messrs. John Clough and Sons, Steeton.

German artillery bombardment, WW1

Bertram was Wounded in Action for a third time before he was Killed in Action on 18th September 1918. He was killed instantly by an artillery shell whilst advancing on the enemy in the closing weeks of the war.

He was 25 years of age

Steeton Soldier Killed

Miss Greenwood, Station Road, Steeton, received the sad news on Wednesday morning that her nephew, Pte. Bertie Clough, of the Tyneside Scottish, had been killed in action. An officer of the battery writes that Pte. Clough was killed instantly by an enemy shell whilst advancing. He was most willing and faithful in all he undertook, and his death is a great loss to the battery. Pte. Clough, who is the son of Mr. Frederick Clough, of Crosshills, joined the army in April, 1916. He has been wounded on three occasions, and a little over 12 months ago was seriously wounded in the leg. He only returned to France about a month ago. Previous to joining the army he was employed as a warp-dresser by Messrs. John Clough and Sons.

WORLD WAR 2

Ironically, exactly 25 years later on 20th September 1943, Bertram's older brother Thomas Douglas Clough was Killed in Action whilst serving with the Merchant Navy during WW2.

Thomas was serving aboard the S.S. Fort Longueuil which had been completed in December 1942 for the USA War Shipping Administration and lend-leased to the British Ministry of War Transport.

On 8th August 1943, the Fort Longueuil arrived safely at Alexandria, Egypt with a cargo of government stores including ammunitions.

On 19th September 1943, the unescorted Fort Longueuil was torpedoed by the German U-boat Ottoheinrich Junker (U-532) in the Indian Ocean and sank immediately. The ships complement consisted of 59 crew members from Britain, India and Canada including ten British gunners. The ship was armed with one 4 inch and five 20mm guns.

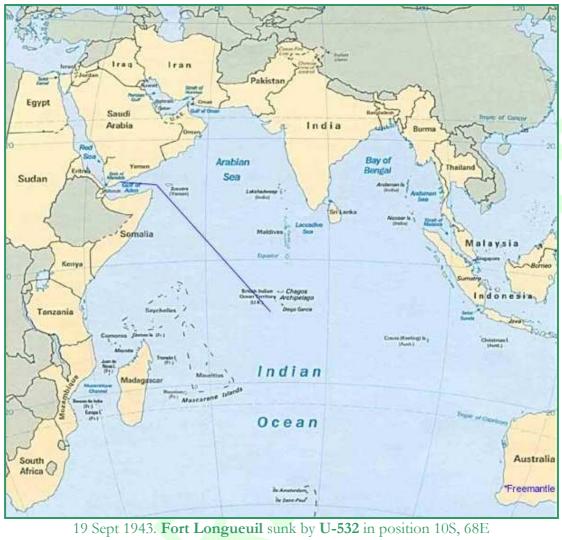

Only two Indian crewmen managed to survive on a raft and became Japanese prisoners on 1 February 1944 when their raft drifted ashore on Sumatra after 134 days at sea.

Thomas Douglas Clough was one of 57 crew members to perish.

He was 53 years of age
